

Editorial

Published Date: 11/09/2018

Edible vaccines to combat Infectious Bursal Disease of poultry

<h2>Editorial</h2>

Poultry industry is a domineering section of agriculture sector in the world as it provides meat, income and employment. Of the poultry industry, broiler chicken is dominating, as US export was more than 41 billion pounds of chicken (about 16.5 percent of p...

Research Article

Published Date: 09/11/2018

Effects of KCl \(rpm/Heat\) on Bacterial Protease Production in E. coli, P. aeruginosa and E. faecalis

<h2>Abstract</h2>

Background: Proteases are a group of enzymes that catalyze the cleavage of peptide bonds in proteins found in nature. Microbial protease constitutes one of the most important for industrial applications. Proteases play a crucial r...

Mini Review

Published Date: 04/05/2018

Significant influence for vitamin K on different metabolic diseases according to positive effect on levels of both vitamin D, and calcium

<h2>Abstract</h2>

Vitamin K was discovered as nutrient of blood clotting. There are two main types of vitamin K, vitamin K1, and vitamin K2. Although the structure of vitamin k is stable but also, there are differences between them. Vitamin k1 is mainly present in dark green ...

Mini Review

Published Date: 01/05/2018

ABC and MFS Transporters: A reason for Antifungal drug resistance

<h2>Abstract</h2>

Fungi cause a variety of diseases and are difficult to treat owing to their eukaryotic nature resulting in dearth of antifungal targets at hand. This problem is further elevated many folds due to the resistance mechanisms of fungi through which they circumve...