

Mini Review

Published Date: 06/12/2020

Applications to reduce the amount of excess cement for cement-retained implant supported prostheses: Mini review

Cement-retained implant-supported restorations has been preferred by many clinicians due to its ease of production, low cost and similarity to dental supported restorations [1]. In the literature, many complications caused by residual cement, ranging from acute severe bone resorpt...

Opinion

Published Date: 05/15/2020

Determination of calcium in the tooth structure by using flame emission spectrophotometer

Calcium is the most common element in the tooth’s structure. In addition, calcium is one of the elements that are effective in maintaining dental health. As a result of calcium deficiency, the tooth becomes brittle and begins to rot. Calcium deficiency usually occurs in acidic ...

Editorial

Published Date: 04/28/2020

Behaviour management during dental treatment!!!

Behavioral dentistry is an interdisciplinary science, which needs to be learned, practiced and reinforced in the context of clinical care and within the community oral health care system. The objective of this science is to develop in a dental practitioner an understanding of the interperso...

Research Article

Published Date: 04/24/2020

Tooth erosion and the role of pepsin reflux

<h2>Abstract</h2>

Objective: The purpose of the study was to evaluate if there is a link between salivary pepsin levels and tooth erosion. Also, to determine if gastroesophageal reflux disease (GERD) is responsible for much of the tooth erosion se...

Mini Review

Published Date: 04/03/2020

Bifid Mandibular Canals: A case report and mini review

The presence of bifid mandibular canals is an unusual but not rare occurrence. The mandibular canal containing the inferior alveolar artery, vein, and nerve, originates from the mandibular foramen and terminates at mental foramen [1-4]. In radiology, mandibular canal's ap...

Short Communication

Published Date: 03/18/2020

Trends in Teledentistry

<h2>Abstract</h2>
Socioeconomic barriers appears to be the greatest threat to dental care apart from considering the geographic location of the population. Access to need of care becomes primary consideration and through teleconsultation it is possible to overcome these barriers...

Research Article

Published Date: 01/09/2020

An evaluation of hardness of commercially available provisional restorative materials: An in vitro study

<h2>Abstract</h2>
Statement of problem: Provisional restorations play a critical role in the success of restorative treatment so they must maintain their integrity in the oral environment throughout the diagnostic and restorative phases....